GCQ-R - RETIREMENT

GCQ-R

The board retains the right to retire its employees if the board has a good faith doubt that the employee can, because of a mental or physical infirmity, fulfill the employee's contractual obligations, the policies, the rules, or the adopted position guides of the board because of a mental or physical infirmity. The board reserves the right to have its employee examined by a physician of its choice to determine whether or not the employee is mentally and/or physically able to fulfill the obligations of the employment contract, the policies, the rules, or the position guides of the board.

The costs for any examination referred to in this rule will be borne by the board.
